Section C: Reading Comprehension

Read the following passages carefully and answer the questions. Mark the correct choice on your answer sheet.

Passage 1

1 Dr. Mohammad Gharib (1909–1975), a well-known Iranian physician and one of the founders of modern pediatrics, was born in the small village of Garkan near Ashtian. As a child, he often observed nature with great curiosity and paid close attention to people's behavior and the way they treated one another. His father, Mirza Ali-Asghar Gharib, recognized his son's intelligence and gave him the
5 opportunity to pursue his dreams and continue his studies at a time when it seemed almost impossible for ordinary children to receive higher education. After graduating from Dar ul-Fonoon in Tehran, Gharib went to France to study medicine. The comfortable life he experienced there did not tempt him to stay, and he later returned to Iran to serve his country. Throughout his career, he believed that medicine was not a business but a sacred duty. He taught his students that doctors should not measure success by wealth
10 or fame but by the relief they bring to human suffering. He worked tirelessly for poor patients and emphasized honesty, empathy, and respect in all areas of medical practice. Even fifty years after his death, Dr. Gharib's name continues to symbolize compassion, integrity, and true devotion to humanity.

Passage 3

1 South Korea is a leader in using artificial intelligence (AI) in education. In 2025, the country began introducing AI-powered digital textbooks in subjects like mathematics, English, and computer science. These smart textbooks adapt to each student’s learning pace, giving personalized content and feedback. The goal is to make learning more engaging and efficient. One example is the Samsung Smart School
5 program, which provides students with digital devices and educational content to improve digital literacy. This program has been used in many schools, helping students learn better and reducing gaps in access to technology. AI tools like GPTeens and QANDA also support students. GPTeens is an AI chatbot that helps with homework, while QANDA is a math platform that shows step-by-step solutions. However, the use of AI in schools has faced challenges. In August 2025, South Korea scaled back its AI textbook
10 program because of concerns about privacy, screen time, and teacher jobs. AI textbooks are now considered supplementary, showing that careful implementation is essential.

Passage 4

1 In recent years, scientists have tried to understand what truly makes people happy. Research in psychology shows that happiness is not simply the result of wealth, beauty, or success. Instead, it depends more on our relationships, sense of purpose, and daily habits. People who spend time with friends and family, help others, and express gratitude tend to report higher levels of well-being. Researchers also note
5 that we can improve our happiness by practicing mindfulness, kindness, and positive thinking in our daily lives. Studies reveal that happiness is partly influenced by biology. Our brains release chemicals such as dopamine and serotonin when we experience positive emotions. However, these feelings can fade quickly if we focus too much on competition or material possessions. Interestingly, researchers have found that practicing mindfulness and kindness can increase life satisfaction. Mindfulness helps people focus on the 10 present moment rather than worrying about the past or future. Kindness, even in small acts, strengthens emotional connections and improves mood.

94. According to the text, what factors contribute most to happiness?

- a) Money and material success
- b) Competition and ambition
- c) Relationships and daily habits
- d) Physical beauty and popularity

95. What happens when people focus too much on material possessions?

- a) They become more generous
- b) Their happiness fades quickly
- c) They produce more serotonin
- d) Their social life improves

Lorestan University English Proficiency Test (LUEPT)

96. What is the main benefit of mindfulness, according to the text?
- a) It helps people focus on the present moment b) It teaches people to compete better
- c) It increases material wealth d) It replaces biological influences
97. What does the text suggest about happiness?
- a) It cannot be changed by human behavior b) It only depends on genetics
- c) It can be developed through positive actions d) It is the same for everyone
98. Which of the following sentences could best serve as the conclusion for this text?
- a) Happiness is shaped mainly by brain chemistry and physical health.
- b) True happiness grows from positive habits and meaningful connections.
- c) People can find happiness only through fame and financial success.
- d) Modern life makes it difficult for anyone to stay truly happy.
99. The word “release” in line 6 is closest in meaning to:
- a) produce b) block c) destroy d) measure
100. The word “we” in line 5 refers to:
- a) Researchers b) People in general c) Students d) Scientists
